Objectives: -1. Plantation programs often aim to contribute to environmental conservation by increasing green cover, restoring degraded land, preventing soil erosion, and conserving biodiversity.

2. Plantation programs may target the restoration of ecosystems that have been degraded or lost due to deforestation, urbanization, or other human activities. This can include the restoration of forests, wetlands, riparian zones, and other natural habitats.

Brief description: The Eco Club, along with the Department of Botany and NSS, collaborated to host a Plantation Program within the college campus on World Environment Day, June 6th, 2019. The event saw active participation from students. The motto "CARING FOR THE ENVIRONMENT IS NOURISHING ONE'S SOUL" rings true, especially in the current environmental context. As part of NSS initiatives, a plantation program titled "BETTER ENVIRONMENT – BETTER TOMORROW" was organized. Dr. Ch. Bhaskar Rao, the HOD, emphasized the critical role of the environment in sustaining life on Earth. He stressed the need for responsibility and care towards one's environment, highlighting the consequences of past negligence, such as global warming. Dr. Rao urged students and society to plant trees, essential for a pleasant environment, and advocated for the slogan "STOPPING POLLUTION IS THE BEST SOLUTION" to combat environmental degradation. He encouraged individuals to plant trees for a pollution-free society and discouraged the use of plastics, a major contributor to environmental pollution. The program saw the participation of NSS Officer Dr.

Sujatha, along with faculty members from the Botany department. Students from the Eco Club also actively engaged in the plantation program.

Outcomes: - 1. One of the primary outcomes of a plantation program is the expansion of green cover through the planting of trees and other vegetation.

2. Trees play a crucial role in water resource management by regulating water cycles, reducing soil erosion, improving soil water retention, and protecting watersheds.
